

Dutch Barn Preservation Society e-news, 27 March 2011

Dear DBPS Members,

We are working on our 2011 Tour schedule, so stay tuned. Right now we have a bit of news and an information request for you.

First, member and photographer Geoffrey Gross is working on a new book and is looking for interesting barns to include. Here is his note. Although we mostly know about Dutch Barns in the Hudson Valley, remember that Geoffrey knows most of them already, so think about barns he may not have seen.

Request for Photogenic Barns

Photographer Geoffrey Gross (Dutch Colonial Homes in America and our DPBS calendars) is working on a new book for Rizzoli on barns of the northeastern seaboard. He is asking all barn people to suggestion some barns to be included. The region is from Virginia to Maine.

The barns need to be in good condition, have character or an architectural style, and be uncluttered inside and be on well-maintained grounds, and most of all be photogenic. Preference is for barns that have not been published before.

Please send your suggestions, with some helpful info and a photo if possible, to Geoffrey Gross at the email address on the attached postcard.

Second, there is a list of barn parts, including, I think, some Dutch Barn Parts, on Craigslist. Consider helping to save these parts by buying them and using them to put a barn back together. Here is a link to the listing; you may have to cut and paste it on your browser. :

Thanks,

hope to see you soon,
